SOCIAL MEDIA POLICY & GUIDELINES

With the growing presence of social media in our lives, we share a lot of information via conversations on the internet. Social media communication can have an impact on the reputation of individuals as well as that of the organization. The institute has an in-house Committee for Content Management (C4CM), solely responsible for approving and uploading any message, posters, audios, and videos about the institute, its programs, and events. Hence the participants, staff, and faculty will have to seek prior approval before sharing any message on any digital platform.

At the same time, PIMR has put together a broad set of guidelines that all participants, staff, and faculty should keep in mind if they carry the PIMR brand on their internet profiles. This is to help everyone make the right choices on social media, for themselves and the institute, keeping in mind that we are all ambassadors of the brand PIMR.

This document outlines the following:

1. Guidelines when mentioning PIMR in personal profiles
2. Guidelines when managing social media handles on behalf of PIMR

1. When PIMR is mentioned in personal profiles

Keep the following guidelines in mind before posting anything on personal social media handles:

- i. Online can mean forever: Remember that what you post is accessible long after you remove it. Also, comments can be forwarded or copied. Years from now, current or prospective employers can find your posts. They may use this information to ascertain your maturity, and if it is not something you would say to an employer in person, you should think twice about posting it online.
- ii. No view is personal in today's digital world. So even if you comment or write something controversial on social media, thinking it's your personal view, followers of your posts by association can link it back to your place of work or study and judge those institutions as well.
- iii. Respect others. Don't infringe on the privacy of your friends, peers, or faculty. Please do not post personal information of others that could be embarrassing to them or the institute. If posting photos, ask the permission of those involved. If someone objects to your use of an image, avoid using it.

- iv. Communications made in a personal capacity through social media must not:
- Use PIMR's logo on any private social media sites
 - Include anything that could be considered discriminatory against, bullying, or harassment of any individual.
 - Make offensive or derogatory comments, spew personal abuse, insult, spread hatred, communalize or discriminate against any person, state, religion, country, race, gender, disability, sexual orientation, belief, or age. Doing so will make you liable to be punished according to institute rules and state and central laws.
 - Posting or sharing images, audios, videos, or anything that are discriminatory/offensive or links to such content
 - Depict or encourage unacceptable, violent, illegal, or dangerous activities, e.g., sexual Harassment or assault, fighting, vandalism, academic dishonesty, drunk and disorderly behavior, drug use, etc., through posting pictures, videos, or comments
 - Breach of copyright.
 - Breach of cybercrime law of the country
- v. When things go wrong - If you have indeed posted something, which has been construed as offensive, the consequences can range from mild to very serious. Reach out to the program office to help you deal with the issue in the best possible manner.
- vi. If your social media views are controversial, please remove your association with PIMR from your profile.
- vii. Always think before you write. Anything that you write on social media is a reflection of your personality, your educational background, and your upbringing. If your content is considered insensitive, it reflects poorly on the institution where you are currently enrolled.
- viii. Always be polite and respectful in all your social media interactions. You can agree or disagree with others healthily, befitting your education, personality, family, professional, and the institutes/workplace you represent. No matter what your views are, you can choose to post them following the societal rules of acceptable discourse and healthy debate.

- ix. Use privacy settings. Understand and use the privacy settings on social networking sites. If you do not, your personal information is available to the entire world. For example, do not provide personal identifying information such as date of birth, phone numbers, home addresses, class schedules, etc.
 - x. Exercise caution. Be aware of who you add as a friend to your site. Do not allow someone else to create and manage accounts on your behalf.
 - xi. Get connected and use social media to change your professional and personal life positively. Social media is a great way to learn about and connect with new people and communities. Search out those people and groups you want to learn more about and connect with them. In addition, you can use social media to understand better a subject you're interested in or explore your creative interests and career goals.
 - xii. Prestige Institute of Management & Research, Indore affiliation should be mentioned in all external communication.
 - xiii. When writing for external platforms, please note that 'Views are personal.'
 - xiv. Professional Whatsapp groups should not share unverified, discriminatory, or inflammatory content.
 - xv. Personal social media handles must not carry the PIMR name in the users
